'Warm up' for anti-fire week

The Granite City Fire Department conducted a fire desired and the conducted and of rescuing persons from the roof and a second floor window.

Two pumpers the aerial hadder truck, the aesistant all converged on the newspaper office for a simulated fire. Fire hoses were strung to all parts of the building, but the water was not turned on. Ladders were used for a simulated rescue from the roof and a volunteer was "rescued" from the second floor, being assisted down the aerial ladder. The practice, the first in a Granite City business establishment, was staged as a "warmup" for Fire Safety Week, which opens Sunday and runs through Saturday, Oct. 11.

Similar drills at other businesses may help firemen become familiar with the building layouts and problems which might be encountered, should a fire start. Employes also are trained in proper evacuation techniques and in the use of fire extinguishers.

No solutions yet on protecting President

By LESTER BELL Press-Record
Washington Bureau
Two attempts on the life of President Ford in 17 days produced a strange apathy on Capitol Hill.
Senators

Mostly, their prescriptions call for a new federal agency to spend more taxpayers' money in administering, another complex set of regulations designed to give someone an awful migraine and make lawyers richer.

Let the President send a proposal to Congress or deliver his State of the Union address,

Statesmanlike, purr his partisans; balderdash, growl his foes: But witness two gursteing But witness two gursteing and the partial par monplace of our time.

Only Sen. Charles H. Percy among the Illinoisans reacted immediately to the latest at mineral statement. He deplored to but offered no solution. Neither did several others in the diegation when questioned.

Actually, short of locking the President in Fort Knox, there reaches from taking possible at him.

"There seems to be no perfect way to prevent such appalling incidents," says Percy. Laymen have an important function to fulfill; the jury system, for example, rightfully relies on average citizens chosen at random rather than on criminologists.

rightfully relies on average citizens chosen at random rather than on criminologists. Nevertheless, the role of non-professionals in overseeing and evaluating complex therapy and counseling programs in Madison County has always left a lot to be desired, and still does.

Counseling-instructional-vocational programs developed with state, county and local finding have grown considerably, and undeniably involve large expenditures. Historically, bureaueracy in America has brought with it varying degrees of effectiveness and efficiency, with taxpayers sometimes getting a bargain and other times wincing over financial waste.

A seven-member board created by Madison County government under Law 708, and commonly known as the 708 Board, has had commonly known as the 708 county and the second of the second of the second over the years, judging by its September meeting.

has changed over the years, judging by its September meeting.

Its realm involves distribution of some of the funds utilized by various agencies to advise or rehabilitate persons with emotional or developmental problems. In fairness to 708, it would be hard to find a topic more fraught with concern and even anguish for those aided and their families. A few years ago, there were instances of 708 kg "cryects" making supprise visits to distribute the results of the resu

OATH, the landlord, are serving a gadfly function, visiting often and commenting adversely on Specialized's operating procedures.

It turns out that such visits are not only by non-professionals in the field, but under clearly lack objectivity, in that there are "axes to grind" by those doing the

A few in OATH want to become an operating agency as well as landlord, and have gotten 708 to put $30,000 in escrow to perhaps finance OATH operations during part of 1976, after Specialized's lease ex-

Jobs also may be a major target, with a lot of emphasis on hiring a "production-oriented manager" who supposedly would working them much harder, but who also would downgrade the broad therapy program that has been achieved in cooperation with the Illinois Division of Vocational Rehabilitation. The impact on the handicapped could be traumatic if OATH were to take over and substitute such an insensitive, dictatorial approach.

How good or bad is the present program by Specialized? As laymen, we frankly don't know, And we don't think other laymen are fully equipped to judge it, either.

It would be much more reassuring if 708, an OATH faction or other critics weren't the only ones being heard. Perhaps the state government — also a major financial contributor — could provide an expert crease in basic reading skills during the last three years. The bad news was that a group of brainy 17-year-olds had trouble reading and understanding insurance policies, application forms for membership in a book club and traffic tickets.

We're glad to hear that reading skills are improving, although the report seems to go counter to what we've heard lately. And it would seem that reading for pleasure by young people has fallen off in the age of television.

people has fallen off in the age of television.
But it is the bad news part of the story that adults should address, especially educators, bureaucrats and other perpetrators of linguistic sins that baffle 17-year-olds. In the "other" category we are quick to include persons who write for newspaners.

Not that the practice of using a long word where a short word will do is new. In his essay "Politics and the English Language," George Orwell told 30 years ago what a technocrat can do to the what a technocrat can do to the language with a translation from a biblical passage. The original, from Ecclesiastes: "I returned and saw under the sun that the race is not to the swift, nor the battle to the strong, neither yet bread to the wise, nor yet riches to men of understanding, nor yet favour men of skill: but time a chance happeneth to them all." Orwell's view of how a techno-

Such gobbledy gook would be laughable if it was not all too typical of breakdowns in communication existing in our society today. Long, multi-syllable words, passive voice, use of unfamiliar words add up to what the National Council of Teachers of English calls Doublespeak.

There are real dangers in such clouded writing. There is abdication of responsibility involved when a person writes "It was noted" instead of "I noted." It is a pallid neutrality that apparently stems from a scientific de sire to be meticulously objective.

"The major danger here," writes education authority Rexwrites education, "Is that people who use language conventions that relieve them of responsibility for their words and actions will tend increasingly not to assume that responsibility."

The English teachers' organization warns that mangling the language is a conscious or un-we cannot talk any longer, we fight.

We are quoting several authorities today, and we would conclude by quoting one of the best on the subject of good writing: Fowler's "The King's English." He urges writers "to be direct, simple, brief, vigorous and lucid," and offers these vocabulary rules:

"Prefer the familiar word to — "Prefer the concrete word

- "Prefer the single word to the circumlocution.

— "Prefer the short word to — "Prefer the Saxon word to

If more people followed these rules we would go far toward staving off the 1984 world of Dou-blespeak.

Springfield bureau — Accountability needed in the transportation agency and other Illinois state expenditures

mine the legality of any spending mine the legality of any spending request.

The General Assembly over-whelmingly passed the bill. In the House it was approved 128-0 and in the Senate 53-1. Yet the governor has seen fit to flaunt the mandate of the people's representatives — the state legislature — and stiffe the much-needed expansion of the power of the compariols:

needed expansion of the power of the comptroller. In vetoing the bill, Walker said it was the function of executive department auditors and the auditor general to review prements of state funds. What this amounts to is spending the money first and then deciding if it was spent properly. Even the auditor general himself, Robert Cronson, had given his support to pre-audit powers for the comptroller. The comptroller pays the bills. He certainly needs the authority to examine a bill

Gov. Dan Walker, without making his usual public announcement, quietly vetoed one of the most important pieces of legislation passed by the General Assembly last spring.

The bill was an attempt to restore accountability in the spending of state funds, so obvicusly lacking with the disclosure of the "imystery employes" in the state Department of Transportation earlier this year.

Under the legislation, Comptroller George Lindberg would have been empowered to conduct field pre-audits, investigations and hearings to determine the legality of any spending asking the person to come to his office for an interview to determine that the employe worked for the state and where the work was being performed. At Walker's direction, the employes refused to comply and the comptroller had no power to force them.

Out of this situation the legis-

force them.

Out of this situation the legislation was developed to expand the comptroller's powers — the measure just vetoed by Walker.

We believe this is one situation that certainly warrants an override by the General Assembly. When a piece of legislation is so obviously needed ... when that need is so overwhelmingly recognized by the elected representatives of the people that they approve it with only one dissenting vote in both houses ... then the governor, by virtue of his veto, has ignored that need and the wishes of the people for his personal reasons.

We strongly urge the General Assembly to override the governor's veto and help restore accountability in the spending of the taxpayers money.
